NURTURING CONFIDENCE AMONG CHILDREN

Creating a positive climate at home or school is essential to boost the confidence of our children. A positive attitude goes a long way in fostering enthusiasm, self – awareness and belief in ones abilities to understand and comprehend that mistakes are taken by school and home as learning opportunities.

Learning done at school and home should be rich and continuously monitor the competency skills of students, moving them to more challenging opportunities. Once the competency skill is established, children can use them in day to day life with ease. Children must be given opportunities to work collaboratively in school and at home in different situations that can enable them to boost their confidence. When resolving conflicts children must be taught to apply collaborative approach than a competitive one.

Here are few tips that can help parents and teachers in nurturing confidence among children:

- Encourage and motivate children to explore, conquer and learn. This will enhance their confidence.
- Provide opportunities that can enable children to rely on their potential and abilities.
- As a member of responsive learning community, create opportunities for children to work collaboratively when it comes to resolving conflicts, sharing ideas for projects and participating in competitions.
- Discuss with children that every experience is beautiful, to love whatever they do.
- Look for opportunities to praise efforts of children. While praising be discrete with words that you use. A light touch on the shoulder, smile can be used for every day efforts while adjectives such as awesome, stupendous work and 'terrific' can be used for truly outstanding accomplishments.
